FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED.

Finding that they have more than time to lay claim to anything than they have money to pay for, the aldermen are now wondering which of the streets can be struck off the list with least public disvantage or dissatisfaction.

How would it do to lay down the rule that the streets shall be paved in the order in which the petitions for paving were received? It has been generally understood that this wise-sounding rule of "First come first served" was the standing order in reference to local improvements of all kinds. But there is a pretty strong suspicion in some quarters that the rule has not been lived up to in the case of the Wright and should have been. There should not be any proper ground for such suspicion, and if it were made plain that improvements are now carried out strictly on that basis the aldermanic pathway would be a smoother one than it will otherwise be.

As long as improvements are made only in response to petitions, the first petitioners are, by every consideration of fairness, entitled to first attention. If the council are prepared—as would perhaps be wise—to start a systematic improvement of all streets, working from the most disadvantageous of various without regard to the date of petition, the council might fairly claim the right to sit as arbiters and to carry out this plan in disregard of petitions. But while the petition system is in force the council have no right to vary the rule that improvements should be made in the order in which they are presented.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE.
The Ununist friends in Great Britain evidently believe the British Government will prefer to drop the loan scheme rather than stake their political lives on the chance of getting it approved by a majority of the Canadian population in general election or by means of a plebiscite. Ununist newspapers have been calling upon the British Government to begin construction of three more dreadnaughts to take the places of those which would have been built with the proceeds of the "restitution" loan. They have been so successful that the Government have agreed to begin this year three ships which were to have been laid down next spring. These demands may be made for political purposes only, with the object of embarrassing the Asquith Government, and in hope of making people in Great Britain think the naval vessels to be really needed.
Or they may proceed from a conviction that the ships are really required to preserve the margin of naval superiority deemed essential to the security of Great Britain. In the latter event the Minister of War, Mr. Borden and the supporters of this side and water and Ununist papers on the other side of having resorted to a species of deception. It has been consistently represented by the Premier and his supporters and by their friends in Great Britain that the situation was not "to be taken on the Canadian people part of the burden of naval defence which would otherwise have to be borne by the people of Great Britain. We have been told that this loan was of the nature of a special donation, its object being to supplement—not to lessen—the British naval appropriations, in hope that by this extra expenditure the British navy would be given so decided a lead as would strike terror into the heart of the Kaiser and effectively dispel any dreams the German statesmen might have of breaking down the sea walls of England. The Ununist press and the Canadian papers do not mean that the contribution would have accomplished no such purpose, but was simply designed as a means of shifting to the Canadian tax-payer part of the burden of the British tax-payer.

That might be a proper enough readiness to make a contribution if made with the consent of the Canadian tax-payer; but it is not an arrangement of things that should be made without his consent. The demands of the Unionists seem to imply that Mr.
Borden not only adopted automatic methods, but that he did so for a purpose which he deliberately selected, and a purpose which he dare not now undertake to defend.

FOR REASONS SUFFICIENT, BUT NOT STATED.

A resolution was put through Parliament on Tuesday authorizing the Ministers to pay to the Canadian Northern Railway Company subsidies in excess of fifteen millions of dollars.

These subsidies are payable in connection with those sections of the company's line which lie between Ottawa and Port Arthur and between the latter and the Yellow Head Pass, respectively.
The former section parallels the line of the C.P.R., and the latter section the line of the G.T.P. As neither section opens up new territory, a new road had to be founded, and this new display more than ever proves that the Crowley slogan of "That Something New" is a true one and one that is always seasonal.

This reason, as stated by the Minister of Railways and the Minister of Finance, was that the C.N.R. should be given assistance and given in assistance in some form or another in respect to the corresponding sections of their systems. It is to be said that whatever reasons for the payment of the subsidies might fairly be advanced, the Minister of Railways had better have given his assent and rested the matter on the issue upon the poorest one possible.

The C.P.R. was a pioneer railway, to whose construction the Dominion had pledged, upon whose construction the continuance of Confederation depended, projected into and through a new region of whose resources and the natural things had little and cared less. If the project was to be carried out at all it was necessary that the Dominion back the enterprise to a degree not only generous but to a degree which would convince the financial men of the world that the Canadian people believed in the scheme and intended to see it through.

The G.T.P. was also a "new thing" in respect to the main axis section and the section through northern Ontario. The former was projected through a mountainous region almost as little known and regarded by the financial men of the world as the original project of the British Columbia a generation ago. The section from Port Arthur eastward was projected through a known wilderness of rock and scrub in which the C.P.R. had not been able to develop much local traffic in twenty years of operation, and the fixed charges of which would have to be borne by the through traffic generated west of the Lakes.

To argue that because the pioneer railway had been heavily subsidized, and that because one competitive road had been afterwards given general backing as a means of destroying the C.P.R. cannot—therefore future through lines should be assigned in corresponding degree, is to lay down a principle foolish in itself and of dangerous application.

The plain fact is that the Minister of Railways is perfectly free to treat the Canadian Northern Company in any way that they were willing to treat the G.T.P.—and failed to submit what that reason was. That does not mean that the public cannot—or will not—surmise what the reason is.

Deborah Conviction Quashed.
Toronto, June 6.—Judge Morris this morning gave a decision of the "Deborah" trial, the coroner having been charged with performing an informal play. The conviction had been appealed and a new trial resulted.

ENORMOUS VOLUME OF CONSTRUCTION WORK HAS BEEN LAUNCHED BY THE CITY

PRELIMINARY work on the construction of the big river sewer at the mouth of the big tunnel under the river, forming the siphon. The actual laying of these pipes will not start until the fall, but at present the city does not own the rifle range property, but will have to purchase it from the Department of Militia and Defence. The mouth of the big tunnel sewer is at the edge of the river bank, straight across from the end of Jasper Avenue. At the point where it crosses Jasper Avenue east it is one hundred feet below the street level.

The size of the sewer may be gauged from the photograph showing the comparative height of a man with the diameter of the tunnel.

Many Mooted Questions Cleared Up and Umpires are Given Clearer Instructions as to Decisions Which Are Usually Called Into Question

The baseball seating rules committee of the Baseball Writers' Association meeting in New York, Sunday, cleared up several mooted points as follows:

Sacrifice Bits.

Major league rules in favor of crediting a batter with a sacrifice bit on any kind of a bunt which scores a runner from third. Still others are in favor of a player being allowed to bunt if that advances a man to base, whether the forward movement be from third to the plate or from first to second, or second to third.

Both propositions were turned down.

Exhibit B.

Several times thus season men have scored from second on a long fly to the outfield and the question has arisen whether the general rule of thumb is general understanding was that a sacrifice fly was one that scored a run from third to the plate, no extra bases except that it scores more from second even more so, and a sacrifice.

Baseball Errors.

Another point on which there has been a wide diversity is this: If a pitcher strikes a wild pitch or a catcher has a dropped catch, and the ball starts to steal, does the batter error count as well as the stolen base?

Rule 55, section 8, opening sentence, of the scoring rules under "Head of Error" has had the clause inserted, "unless, however, the parentheses added, and will read: 'An error shall be deemed to be made by any player who gives the ball to another player, unless he is the last man to touch the ball, even though he complete the play by making the putout.'"

Another case was left over—that of a fielder who drops a ball in his hand, second with no one to cover the bag. The receiver has been hitherto credited with an error, which is not right.

It was voted to make one or more bases when a perfect play would have insured his being put out.

The error aimed at is this, and it had not been covered before. A rule news of which was flashed like lightning like rapidly throughout country, clergymen found their voices and, in the heat of the moment, many said incisive things which their sacerdotal judgment must replace them with. We hold no brief for the prize ring. Its general immorality and its evils, elevating the human race or improving the morale of the community, but neither are we so puritanical as to condemn legitimate, healthy sport simply because it is a pastime. We hold, however, emphatically enough, believe they are promoting its welfare by pushing boxing to the public's attention, to the morbid and therefore abnormal passions of the crowd. The effect of such an action is never seen in Canada, where it is often permitted to carry otherwise same citizens off their feet and urge them to put a hand upon all that is good in life. Such an action would be unfortunate. Boxing, like any other healthy exercise, has its right place in the development of the human body. The qualities it develops are too well known to require repetition and under proper supervision and regulation it can be a valuable aid to the slightest objection to its continuance.

The onus is on the Canadian fathers. On the contrary, if our city fathers would take the lead in the movement would only encourage boxing along some lines there would be little to be done. A sound healthy body can only be secured by some methods of development, and although it may be possible to do this in other ways, if open to our citizens it should not be forgotten that the best results can only be obtained by the application of principles to the natural inclinations of those taking part. What is regarded as sports by some is considered work by others.

The article is as follows:

Sport & Its Legitimacy. Sphere. Montreal, Quebec. W. C. Williams and others who do not deplore the outcome of the ring event in Calgary the other day say that the public should be allowed to witness the contests and that the authorities should not interfere with the sport. The decision of the law court in this country is that boxing is a legitimate sport and that it should be encouraged. The qualities it develops are too well known to require repetition and under proper supervision and regulation it can be a valuable aid to the slightest objection to its continuance.

The onus is on the Canadian fathers. On the contrary, if our city fathers would take the lead in the movement would only encourage boxing along some lines there would be little to be done. A sound healthy body can only be secured by some methods of development, and although it may be possible to do this in other ways, if open to our citizens it should not be forgotten that the best results can only be obtained by the application of principles to the natural inclinations of those taking part. What is regarded as sports by some is considered work by others.

"It is to be hoped then that the authorities will not be stampeded by the clamor of the public to allow a ring and event which was purely accidental. What is required is not a total abolition of the sport but a thoughtful regulation of it, and the enforcement of such rules as may be deemed necessary. Amateur competitions for points should be encouraged."

Mathewson Has Been In the Main Tents Thirteen Years

"Matty's" Endurance Due to Economy of Arm Power in Box--His Balls Are Few But Delivered So That a Strike Is Easly Handled By Outfielders

The secret of Matty's 13 years in the main tent with the New York Giants isn't to be found in the around-the-clock diet he follows or in his economies. Athing that the suns in a pitcher's arm are subjected to is certainly well deserved, and year evens than he forces them to a ball and that conservation means prolonging the life of those sinews, it is the way he uses them. The power of a pitcher is compelled to throw more just that much less of effort. Matty's secret is that a pitcher only has to throw 190 balls a game instead of 190 or 200, or whatever the case may be. It is only logical that the pitcher who does this will be just that much greater, allowing, of course, that the power of the arm is not lost.

Condensed, this sum up into the statement that Mathewson probably has pitched more complete games than any other pitcher in the history of baseball. This is the reason why the Giant's star has been pitching for so long. He has the right stuff, and also the reason why in the pinch he always possesses a reserve power that puts him through his 13 years.

Lets Batter, Bill.

Of course, there are different means of accomplishing this conservation, but the best from the point of view of this time with the result that the confines of an ordinary ball park have not been great enough to keep the ball in play. Matty has learned to let the ball up to "let the latter hit" and let the fielders do the work. The pitcher can't do all the work, there's no way known at the present writing how to stop a ball when it goes over one's head or to stone wall it when it has been propelled into a velocity of 90 or per cent.

Mathewson has the comfited facility of being able to pitch without letting them bang the ball for keeps. In other words, while he endevours to pitch just as few balls as straight as the Cuban never to terred at it. Egan was thrown out at second and the play lost the game. Almeda explained that as the ball came in he changed his mind, thought after all, "I might tell Yerka, 'I know I would not hit it.'

Joe launched the Cuban into a career with the Reds. America, a bright fellow and a rapid thinker, had a good idea of what would happen if he changed his mind. It hadn't occurred to him to wonder. Thinking over it, he got the idea to teach the team and the press to teach the boys to think.

He referred to the close cooperation in the college, in Vancouver, in Edmonton and in Winnipeg, these three universities being the strongest.
